Forecast For Northeast England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Friday 17 Dec 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Frost lifting slowly with some lingering mist, otherwise bright.

Today:
Dry with sunny spells, some patchy cloud likely as well. Morning mist could be slow to clear in places, and remaining chilly here. Fog patches forming during Friday evening where clear periods persist. Maximum temperature 7 deg C (45 deg F).

Tonight:
A misty night with increasing chance of fog forming. This could be dense with light and variable winds. Frost also returning with chance of freezing fog. Remaining clearer over hills. Minimum temperature -3 deg C (27 deg F).

Saturday:
Cold start with some frost then generally dull and misty with fog slow to thin and break during Saturday. Some sunny spells especially over higher ground. Maximum temperature 8 deg C (46 deg F).

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:
A cloudier picture is likely for Sunday with fog mostly lifting. Remaining dry. Turning brighter with sunshine likely for Monday and Tuesday and feeling cold. Chance of a coastal shower.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.